"We people of Dixie are richer for having two flags. One brings to us the blessed dreams and memories of our youth, The Stars and Bars. The other stands for OUR COUNTRY, to live for, if need be, to die for, The Stars and Stripes."—
Orren Randolph Smith.

SOME GLIMPSES OF AMARILLO: (1) Capitol Hotel. (2) Herring Hotel. (3) Amarillo Hotel. (4) Armistice Day Parade on Polk Street. (5) Taylor Street at night. (6) Amarillo Paramount theater, show-place of the Plains. (7) Skyline of Amarillo from Elwood Park. (8) Vista of Amarillo High School. (9) Central Presbyterian Church. (10) Potter County Court-house.

WELCOME to the West

★ . . . here to the West — the old west, the new west, we welcome you men who wore the gray in the War between the States. This Amarillo, so proud of being your host today, was not even a town on any map for a generation after the war. When you were offering all you had and all you hoped to have in that titanic struggle of the '60s, "Amarillo" was only the Spanish name of some little streams on far reaches of the unknown Llano Estacado. ★ "Unknown?" — almost, but not quite. From the time of Coronado and his conquistadors in 1541, white men had tried to put on maps and in chronicles something about this Llano, the Staked Plains, this "vast sea of land". Under Jefferson Davis, then secretary of war of the United States, Capt. Marcy, with Lieut. George B. McClellan, in 1853, had turned in their volume of reports on explorations in the Palo Duro Canyon. ★ In the years just before the war, Charles Goodnight, intrepid plainsman, scouted out the possibilities of this great ranching country of the prairies and the canyons. During the war, Goodnight, as volunteer in the frontier guard of the Texas forces, helped maintain this far northwestern outpost of the Confederacy. ★ Tides of war which ravaged states to the south and east of Texas touched but lightly the Lone Star state itself. Brave Dick Dowling, with dummy batteries of blackened pine logs and the deadly marksmanship of his Texans with long rifles, at Sabine pass, wrote a glamorous chapter into the story of the war. ★ It took another great war to coin the word "shock troops". But time after time in the War between the States, Hood's brigade of Texans stopped advances, wrecked opposing strategy, and shattered columns of invaders. They were Lee's "shock troops". ★ In treasures of men and of resources Texas poured out its wealth during these years. After those years of conflict, in the perilous years of healing, Texas went patiently about the task of healing up its wounds and of helping to heal the wounds of others. ★ To Texas in the years following the war came the sturdiest strains of American stock from all the states of the Southland. Mingling with them came pioneer strains from states north of Mason and Dixon's Line. Here on these high plains in the Panhandle of Texas, an area larger than most states, is a population of more than 97 per cent white American stock, an American commonwealth reverently proud of its remarkable heritage in the blood lines of the Republic. ★ In Spanish, the word "Amarillo" means "yellow". To us who love the name and its background, it stands for the sunshine of the Southwest, the color of cheerful courage. You march with us this year with your unfurled battle flags of the Stars and Bars. May the spirit of our West with treasures of golden memory go with you into the sunset.

WHAT DOES THE COVER TELL?—"Three Soldiers of the South"—perhaps that would be a good name for the picture which Ben Carlton Mead has painted especially for this souvenir book and which we have reproduced on the cover. What incident does this picture celebrate? What story is back of this picture? You can make your own answer. Let the picture tell its own story. Ben Mead is a young Amarillo artist, whose work as mural painter, as illustrator of "Coronado's Children" and of other books and of magazine features, has earned him national recognition. In this picture he has selected individual figures, unknown, unnamed, unsung as titled heroes, and he has endeavored to let them in their own characters portray the driving self-sacrifice which made the story of the Confederacy. Here is the figure on the left, the officer with the sword, a man used to authority, a planter back home perhaps, a man of influence and of distinction. Here is the central figure, the man with the musket, a man used to work, accustomed to responsibility, perhaps a farmer, perhaps a village teacher, conscious of his duties as an elder in his community. Here is the man at the rear, the youth, called perhaps from a hill farm, from the town academy, ready, willing, respectful, unquestioning in his willingness to do the task given him. Is there glory in this task for them? Is there hatred in their hearts? Is there vindictiveness on their faces? Not any of these is the motive which carries these weary soldiers forward. To each is given himself and over that he is master. What he has he gives. They carry on.

With Your Help, Please. ❧ ❧

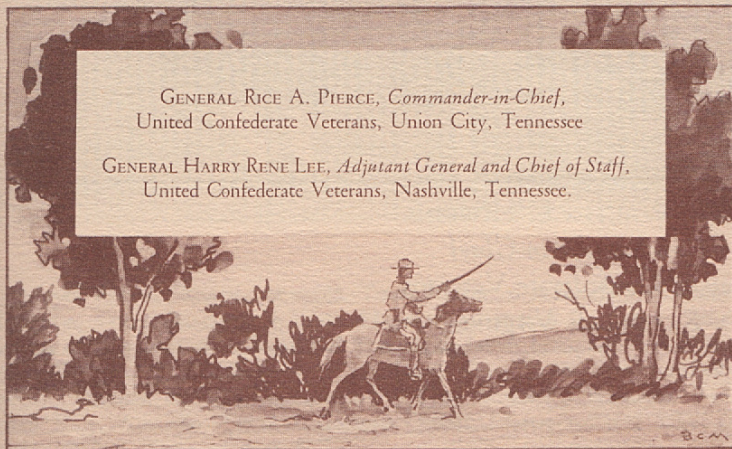

★ This souvenir book is sold for 50 cents per copy. None of them are given away. Publication of the book is sponsored by the Plemons-Shelby Camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans of Amarillo, and sale of the books is handled by ladies and other members of the souvenir book committee. ★ Amarillo citizens in laying out the budget for this reunion believed it impracticable to allot funds for the publication of the souvenir book, a convention feature which has been a high point of every occasion since these reunions began. ★ Last year at Chattanooga the reunion committee paid over $1800.00 for their souvenir book—and without undue assumption, we expect our book to be considerably better than theirs. Not less than that amount and often much more has been paid out at previous reunions for the publication of the souvenir book. This reunion in the Texas Panhandle however would not be possible if the reunion committee here and if Amarillo citizens in general had not made sacrifices of many features of expense in previous reunions and had not at the same time scrupulously allotted the funds which they have gladly contributed for this occasion. ★ This souvenir book is possible because RUSSELL STATIONERY CO. has assumed responsibility for it and has set a cost far less than that paid by the Chattanooga reunion committee last year. Still further than that, RUSSELL STATIONERY CO. assumes liability for over 80 per cent of this set cost. AMARILLO CAMP SONS OF CONFEDERATE VETERANS assumes liability for the remainder of the cost in case this minimum is not reached. Profit, if any, on the books will be shared by the SONS OF CONFEDERATE VETERANS and will be used in meeting expenses of the reunion. No personal profit on the sales goes to the selling force of ladies and others who work as volunteers toward making this a successful feature of the reunion. ★ There may be some criticism of the Amarillo committee for selling these books instead of giving them away. For that reason, this explanation in some detail is made here. It is hoped that appreciation of the book as a self liquidating feature will explain the charge. Those who have undertaken this book feel that it is worth the effort and we hope for your favorable consideration. ★ Possibly and probably many of you who look through this souvenir book of the FORTY FIFTH CONFEDERATE REUNION may wonder why some portrait photographs have been included in this book and why the photographs of other people of at least equal importance have been left out. ★ There is no reason for it except that in compiling this book we have been obliged to use pictures as they have become available and not in any order or according to any set plan. With the exception of a few photographs of state and national figures there is no uniformity in the selection of pictures used in this book. There are hundreds of other men and women directly interested in this reunion whose portraits should appropriately be included in this book. In like manner, although every reasonable effort has been made to secure all the names for all the committees and activities of the reunion, there are doubtless some serious omissions. Limitations of space and of time have made it impossible to organize this material more completely and more systematically. ★ What we are presenting is an impression, and not a complete picture, of the personnel and of the hosts and hostesses of this reunion.—RUSSELL STATIONERY CO.
